Dear Barry,

It was easy to spot another native New Yorker at the recent Jack Henry Executive Conference. Your high energy style, enthusiasm and unique way of getting to the meat of the matter told the story.

I enjoyed every minute of your presentation. Several things stayed with me, especially your definition of a dynamic leader as "one who is actively involved with his business and his people."

Your humorous anecdotal approach to the winning characteristics of today's "savvy leaders" left a lasting impression on me. You confirmed that not only staying involved, but being willing to try new approaches while inspiring my staff to be creative would be the key to our success.

Because you had prepared so well, it was easy to see that this was a program created specifically for this group. You guaranteed a good exchange with us and delivered on that promise as you presented real issues with credible solutions.

Sincerely,

Robert Davis
President and CEO

P.S. Thanks for making this an event one that any of today's business leaders would be glad to participate in.
